Whenever a wave of change
sweeps through an industry, the old ways of making money
tend to dissipate faster than the new ways coalesce.

Scott Rosenberg

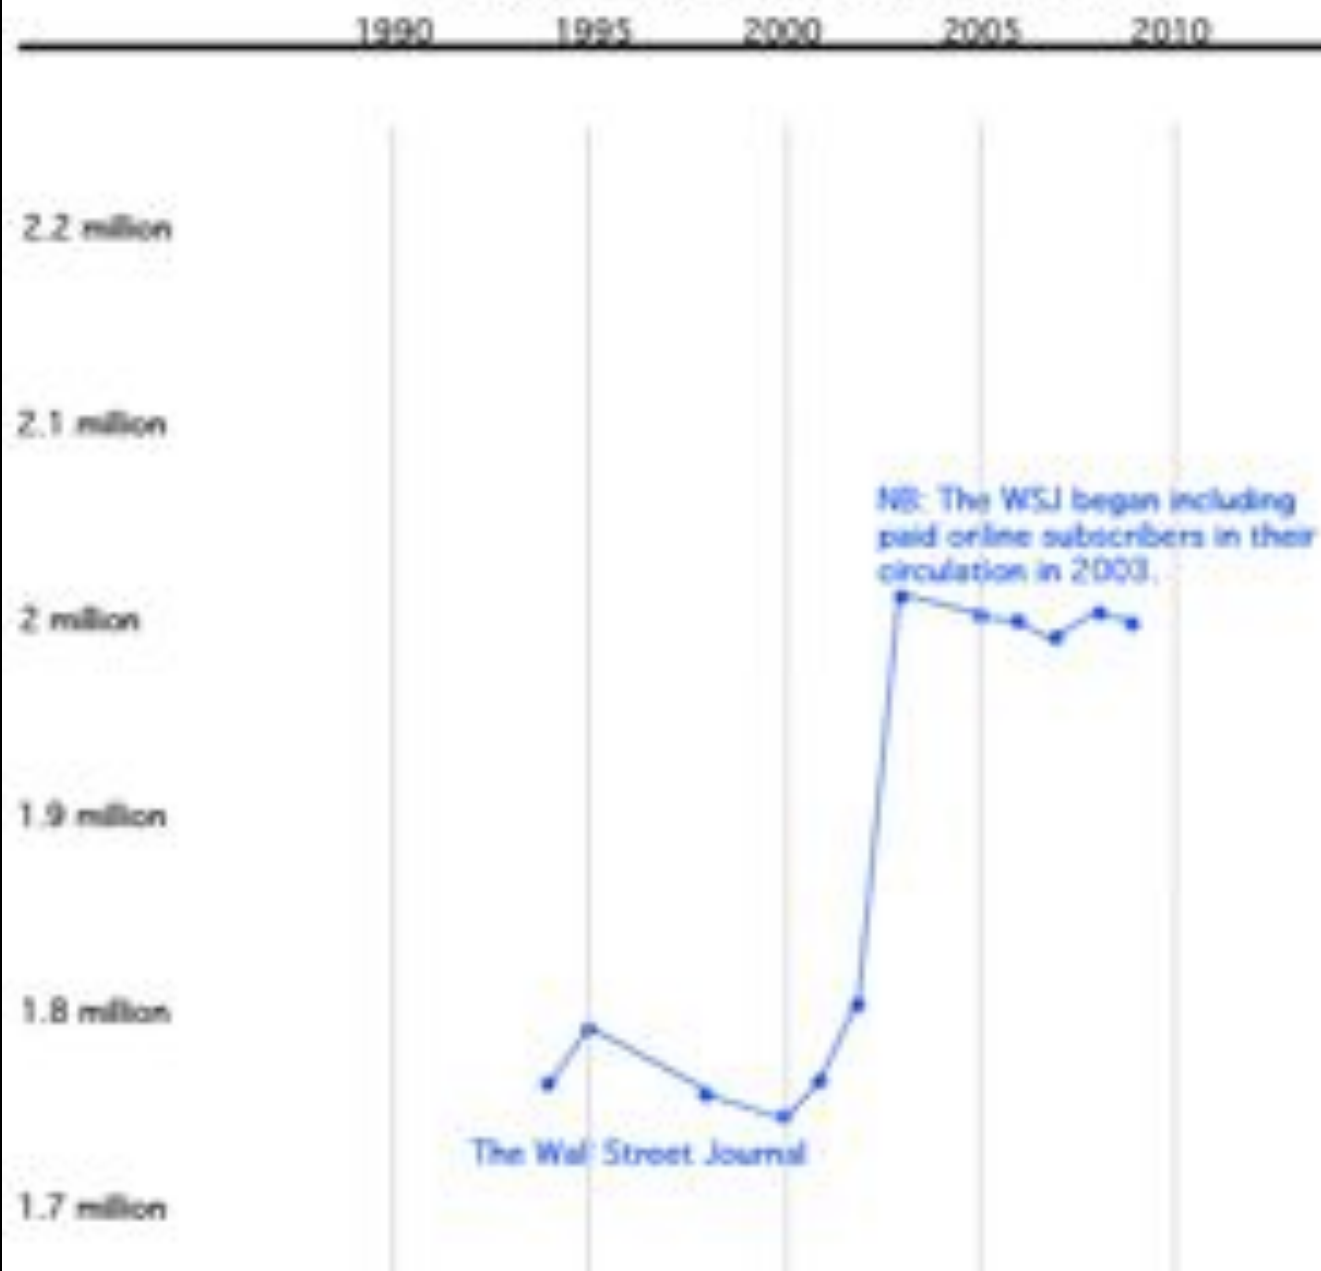

There has grown up in the minds of certain groups... the notion that because a man or corporation has made a profit out of the public for a number of years, the government & the courts are charged with the duty of guaranteeing such profit in the future, even in the face of changing circumstances & contrary to public interest.

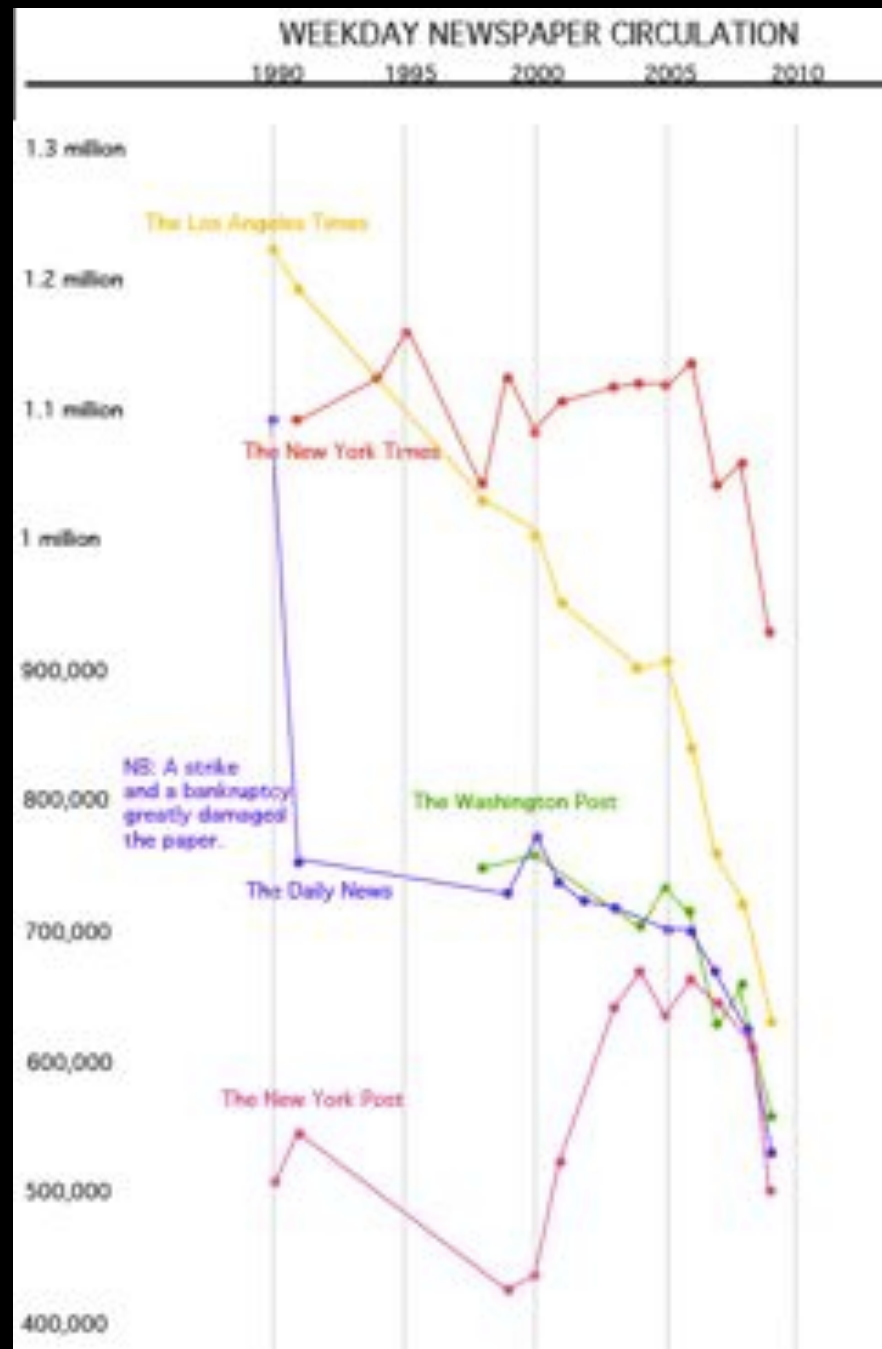

Robert A. Heinlein

Key deal in House's health care vote centered on abortion

REUTERS/Yuri Gritsan

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi is greeted by other Democrats at a news conference about the House vote on health care reform on Capitol Hill Saturday.

By Cynthia Diazkes | Monday, Nov. 9, 2009

The critical agreement that allowed passage of the health care bill in the U.S. House came together in the 11th hour and centered on the politically sensitive issue of abortion rights. Some members of Minnesota's congressional delegation are unhappy the issue has surfaced in the health care debate.

Election 2009: 1-week delay in County Council succession plan

November 8, 2009 at 7:46 pm | In West Seattle news, West Seattle politics | No Comments

Quick followup on the political position that's not settled yet, West Seattle/White Center/Vashon (etc.) District 8 County Councilmember (succeeding County Executive-elect Dow Constantine): Last Thursday, we reported that the council might take action today to set a process for appointing someone to serve till next year's elections. But council spokesperson Frank Abe says that action's been postponed a week "as a courtesy to councilmembers who requested time for further consideration." (Who will seek the job, given the council may decide to only appoint someone not running for the permanent job? Maybe, just maybe, there'll be a hint at this week's monthly meeting of West Seattle's largest political group, the 34th District Democrats, 7 pm Wednesday, The Hall at Fauntleroy.)

Missouri's ban on insurance coverage for abortion is more restrictive than ban in House health bill

REJECTED

Posted 6 p.m. Mon., Nov. 9 - The anti-abortion provision included in the health-care bill that passed the U.S. House on Saturday is similar to the private insurance restriction that has been in place in Missouri for 26 years. Still, some leaders on both sides of the state's longstanding battle over abortion rights foresee possible changes if the federal provision becomes law.

Is New York's Marcellus Shale Too Hot to Handle?

by Abraham Lustgarten, ProPublica - November 9, 2009

As New York gears up for a massive expansion of gas drilling in the Marcellus Shale, state officials have made a potentially troubling discovery about the wastewater created by the process: It's radioactive. And they have yet to say how they'll deal with it. The information comes from the Department of Environmental Conservation, which analyzed 13 samples of wastewater and found that they contain levels of radium-226 as high as 267 times the limit safe for discharge into the environment. Missouri's ban on insurance coverage for abortion is more restrictive than ban in House health bill

Posted 6 p.m. Mon., Nov. 9 - The anti-abortion provision included in the health-care bill that passed the U.S. House on Saturday is similar to the private insurance restriction that has been in place in Missouri for 26 years. Still, some leaders on both sides of the state's longstanding battle over abortion rights foresee possible changes if the federal provision becomes law.

Changes to an enzyme in the brains of women immediately having a baby may explain postpartum depression, a new study shows. The work, conducted by researchers at the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health in Toronto, Canada, were published in the Archives of General Psychiatry and presented by the Max Planck Society.

In the study, researchers used an imaging technique to track levels of the enzyme, monoamine oxidase A (MAO-A), in women's brains immediately following childbirth. MAO-A levels were 43 percent higher in the women who had just had a baby compared to a control group consisting of women who either had children long ago or never had children.

The enzyme breaks down the neurotransmitters serotonin, dopamine and norepinephrine, which are responsible for maintaining our "good moods." If these neurotransmitters are deficient, we feel sadness, followed by the potential to become depressed.

"For most women, the birth of their baby is one of the most strenuous but also happiest days in their lives" wrote Julia Sacher, first author of the study, and her colleagues. "So it is very difficult to understand why almost three-quarters of all women feel down shortly after giving birth. They can suffer from extreme sadness, mood swings, anxiety, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and irritability."

"Our results have the exciting potential for prevention for severe postpartum blues. This could have an impact on prevention and treatment of postpartum depression in the future."

I had post-partum psychosis. But I had schizophrenia diagnosed before I had a baby. When I had the baby, my doctors didn't take my psychosis seriously and refused to treat it. They thought it would go away on its own, but I still have bouts of paranoia, sometimes quite severe and when its severe I lose insight.

A really good article - the physical strain, changes as you have described them, and lifestyle change can be overwhelming. Good scientific study and evidence is a lot better than "it's all in your head".

Pirate Latitudes

A A

Chapter 4

SPEAKING WITH ALL due respect, I must confess that nothing could have prepared me for my arrival in this port." Mr. Robert H. said. His voice nervous, paced up and down the room and cursed the slender, dark, foreign-looking woman who sat in the chair and stared at Almont.

Sir James sat behind her, his head obviously be no pillow and throbbing with pain.

"In the capital of the New World," Hackberry said. "That is the law of the semblance of a man. Sir James," he said, "you must speak when the truth of the matter is at hand and dwelling of the town."

He had been seen at the gallows of Highgate when now a pirate may be found. If he disembarked earlier, you might have seen him. He sighed again. "Sit down," he said, confirm yourself in my judgment as to the matter. You already appear to be."

Charles was obviously unaccustomed to such a favor. He quickly in a chair next to his wife. She was smilingly: a heartfelt gesture from one of the pirates.

One day when he was out walking, he came to an open place in the middle of the forest, and in the middle of this place was a large oak-tree, and, from the top of the tree, there came a loud buzzing-noise.

Winnie-the-Pooh sat down at the foot of the tree, put his head between his paws and began to think.

First of all he said to himself: "That buzzing-noise means something. You don't get a buzzing-noise like that, just buzzing and buzzing, without its meaning something. If there's a buzzing-noise, somebody's making a buzzing-noise, and the only reason for making a buzzing-noise that I know of is because you're a bee."

One day when he was out walking, he came to an open place in the middle of the forest, and in the middle of this place was a large oak-tree, and, from the top of the tree, there came a loud buzzing-noise.

If there's a buzzing-noise, somebody's making a buzzing-noise, and the only reason for making a buzzing-noise that I know of is because you're a bee."

Then he thought another long time, and said: "And the only reason for being a bee that I know of is making honey."

And then he got up, and said: "And the only reason for making honey is so as I can eat it." So he began to climb the tree.
